FULLSTACK DEVELOPER

I'm highly creative, while simultaneously being analytical. I also speak Spanish and have a love of languages. I found a career that allows me to combine all of these! In my former job as a manufacturing technician I worked in a creative environment where I needed to be focused on producing a consistent product that not only was fully functional, but aesthetically pleasing. I was involved in the development process and editing of materials and products to make production more efficient. This started me on the track to forge a career for myself that utilized these skills. Several of my close friends in the industry felt strongly that I would thrive as a software engineer, and after researching for myself and trying some things out for myself, I made the dive in and I couldn't be happier.
